

The proposed rulemaking would only accelerate the decreasing number of information sources for the public. Monopolies are already being created in an area in which more varied ownership of media outlets, not less, is the desired goal. Obviously the market is not helping us achieve this goal which means it can only be achieved through regulation. Information is key to the proper working of a democracy and your proposal does not, in my opinion, foster the flow of information from diverse sources. In this field, citizens are benefitted by more, not less regulation.
